BRANDING GUIDE v.1

Visual Narrative, Mood Boards
& Color Palette

HOW TO EXPLORE Your Branding Guide

The strongest brands tell the same story a million times, but from different angles. It's the art of building brand awareness and familiarity while sparking an emotional connection that feels like first love over and over again.

As you move through this Branding Guide, we establish the Terra Luz story through the lens of varied angles (i.e. positions). Some language may feel repetitive, like you've already seen them from previous sections—that is by intention. Certainly, key phrases will reappear, because we've intentionally woven anchoring words (i.e brand filters) throughout your unique brand story.

Enjoy the read. Highlight and circle parts that especially strike a chord. But first, grab yourself a favorite small bite or elevated sip to treat yourself while you dive into the deck.

This is the beginning of a new chapter to your STR business, and it's worth celebrating along the way.

VISION
& MISSION

INDIGO PALM COLLECTIVE

VISION

United by a shared emotional current, these homes are designed to restore and reenergize travelers.

Where many getaways are designed to help travelers disconnect, Indigo Palm Collective creates desert spaces meant for playful reconnection. Each stay is thoughtfully curated to reawaken presence, creativity, and a sense of belonging—places that feel alive yet calming, expressive yet effortless. United by a shared emotional current, these homes are designed to restore and reenergize travelers in a way that feels inspired yet natural, not prescribed.

No two properties are the same, yet each carries a distinct emotional warmth that is both inviting and lively. Founder Eann Tuan delivers a bubbly hospitality that meets guests exactly where they are and gives them what they didn't realize they needed. Rooted in high-touch hospitality that is both intuitive and intentional, Indigo Palm Collective blends story, style, and human connection, creating spaces that feel personal, considered, and quietly transformative.

Indigo, by nature, represents depth of energy: intuition and heightened awareness. Long associated with creativity and emotional balance, it lives in the space between blue and violet: calm yet charged, grounding yet expansive. Its richness mirrors the quiet power of the desert night sky—reflective and full of possibility.

While indigo within this brand is not spiritual in the traditional sense, these stays are undeniably soulful. They reconnect travelers to themselves, to one another, and to the local experience in ways that linger long after departure—leaving a mark not through spectacle, but through resonance in the simplest moments.

Like the color itself, indigo reveals a wide and beautiful range of expression. Each property within the Indigo Palm Collective carries its own personality, aesthetic, and rhythm, yet all share the same rejuvenating energy—so that no matter the property style, guest capacity or location, guests leave feeling genuinely re-energized, and ready to re-enter the world with enthusiasm.

INDIGO PALM COLLECTIVE

MISSION

Our mission is to create experiential stays that ignite inner energy through outward care.

Like a palm tree rising with quiet confidence from the desert floor, the Indigo Palm Collection mission is to create experiential stays that ignite inner energy through outward care. Offering a nod to the former name “Renewell Stays,” where indigo represents intuition and heightened awareness, the palm reflects a fully alive, vibrant symbol of renewal against a dry landscape.

Indigo Palm Collective homes are designed to restore energy through thoughtful design, interactive amenities, and a deep sense of hospitality where connective roots form and travelers feel held in their desert getaway.

Each property is crafted as a meaningful experience that is elevated by design, while absolutely approachable and jovial in tone. Intentionality doesn’t mean overly serious. It can be playful, too. We like fun.

Designs are created to strike a chord without chasing or lingering too long on trends—spaces that serve the traveler, not the other way around. For a remote worker, this may mean a nimble yet creatively versatile desk station that balances functionality with innovation. Every property evolves with the modern, evolving traveler, shaped by lived use and by a host who grows increasingly attuned to both voiced and unspoken needs over time.

Indigo Palm Collective amenities are layered with subtle messaging and intentional detail that deepen the experience. It’s not simply a kitchen nook with a pass-through bar to the pool—it’s an invitation to linger longer together in an immersive, artful environment, sharing bites of local strawberries you’ll never forget. It’s a set of sun visors that offer personal, stylized shade. Or a fully outfitted family kit designed specifically for infant care—one of the most overlooked and underserved demographics in travel hospitality—made effortless, thoughtful, and fun.

That depth of care is rooted in host Eann herself. Her attentive presence and sincere positive energy translate into a remote hospitality model that's personal and nurtured.

While guests enjoy independence, they are comforted knowing every detail has been considered, from thoughtful correspondence to creature comforts often missing in short-term stays. Guests notice that what lives neatly organized inside drawers and behind peekaboo-designed doors matters just as much to Eann as the "share-worthy" artwork and murals in plain sight.

Together, these pillars hold up the Indigo Palm Collective to a renewing light rarely found in desert getaways. Like palms that quietly regenerate life around them, each stay leaves guests grounded, restored, and re-energized—carrying that sense of renewal with them long after they've gone.

SHAMELESS PLUGS

A punch list of recurring guest reviews and booking trends Indigo Palm Collective has received and observed over time:

- "It's the first time we have truly rested during our vacation with our 3 children! We returned home completely rejuvenated!" - Family of 5
- Even grown dudes repeat book at The Cozy Cactus, a family-focused, fem-leaning property.
- Eann is an OVERACHIEVER in:
 - Communication: guests consistently report "less than 1 minute" for host response time. This is mentioned in 85%+ of reviews and represents a 60-1440x faster response than industry standard!
 - Organization: "The labeling system is unprecedented - in 10 years of Airbnb stays, we've never seen anything like it."
 - Deep Feeler: These are not actual retreats or sanctuaries, but guests describe them as such because they feel genuinely cared for.

BRAND NAME

“Terra Luz”

Literally meaning Earth and Light—TERRA LUZ captures the soul of this sun-washed desert sanctuary. “Terra” evokes the grounding warmth of terracotta walls, stone surfaces, and natural textures that root the home in its desert surroundings. “Luz” reflects the luminous quality of every space, from sunlight streaming across the kitchen bar to the glow of the color rich accents and artwork, infusing each moment with warmth, character, and life.

Together, Terra Luz speaks to balance: the steady, grounded energy of the earth paired with the vibrant, playful rhythm of light. It mirrors the experience guests find here—spaces that invite exhale and connection, indoors and out, calm yet alive with personality, color, and culture. The name embodies a retreat that’s at once restorative, radiant, and unmistakably alive, where every sun-drenched corner and shaded alcove is designed to delight the senses and elevate the spirit.

LISTEN IN

The Terra Luz Playlist

Imagine the Terra Luz ideal guest making their way to their stay, enjoying all that their host has to offer, and leaving with an unforgettable soundtrack in their minds. While every property should hold its own playlist to narrate sunrise to lights out, this compilation accompanies the story of Terra Luz.

DOUBLE CLICK on the button above for a curated music playlist featuring a smooth mix of Cuban essentials and cultured tracks; desert-vibey solo artists like Lord Huron; and pop singers with soul like Bruno Mars and Alessia Cara.

Consider this your starter playlist for Terra Luz guests, as well as a tool to set the mood for your own read of this Branding Guide!

“It’s all about the love, mijo. You
gotta put love in every dish.”

BRAND PERSONALITY

Terra Luz is full of vibrant color and culture reflective of wabi-sabi warmth and the patina of Old Havana.

Terra Luz is a soothing balm in desert terrain—a sensory sanctuary with a Latin undercurrent, where the sun softens, the pace instinctively slows, and everything moves to an unspoken rhythm, steady and warm, like a conga echoing in the background. It's the exhale of the desert: grounded and restorative, offering a cocooned calm as a counterpoint to the Coachella Valley's intensity.

With Cuban character woven throughout, Terra Luz is full of vibrant color and culture reflective of wabi-sabi warmth and the patina of Old Havana. This transportive getaway carries a sense of lived-in, rejuvenating beauty that feels quietly aged, collected, and artful rather than pristine or showy.

Adjacent to Palm Springs' flair and spectacle and next door to La Quinta's dining and cultural refinement, this getaway unfolds in Indio—a revitalizing, up-and-coming corner of the high desert—where residential quiet feels both understated, refreshing and comforting in its effortless ease. Confidently holding its own, Terra Luz is a hidden getaway that breaks the mold of Indio gated communities.

Terra Luz hosts like a retreat without feeling removed, cocooned like you'd feel in the shaded comfort of a cabana. It's relaxed, protective, deeply inviting, and designed for long restorative afternoons, slow dinners, and effortless togetherness.

It's unpretentious yet elevated, vibrant without being loud, and designed to feel sensory and human rather than overly styled.

The Terra Luz Ideal Guest (Who We Are)

WHO WE ARE

WHO WE ARE

The Terra Luz traveler loves being close to what's happening next, just enough to choose from without feeling overwhelmed or rushed to chase it. For them, the real luxury is melting into the present.

Terra Luz is made for groups and families who travel with intention—grown-ups who still know how to play, linger, and let the day unfold. While the property is staged with all king beds to attract adults, it's versatile for hosting children with ease (pack n play, full size trundles, plus queen pull out sofa); and, by intention, its vibrant yet grounded tone promotes a calm and natural rhythm parents crave when traveling with energetic kiddos.

These guests love being close to what's happening next (i.e. Coachella, annual festivals, etc.), just enough to choose from without feeling overwhelmed or rushed to chase it. For them, the real luxury is melting into the present, like letting ocean waves wash over them, admiring a sunset sky change colors, or framing a vibey restaurant as their afternoon getaway.

Sun-soaked afternoons, shared meals, and easy togetherness matter more than rigid itineraries, schedules or spectacle.

They seek out still moments the way a foodie hunts for the best-kept secret, finding joy in the overlooked and the unassuming. They love the thrill of slow travel—digging for gold in quiet corners, residential streets, and places that reveal themselves only if you stay awhile.

WHO WE ARE (cont'd)

Their sense of culture is expansive and curious. They want to be transported to another place, another time, without having to travel far and with just enough familiarity that there's no heavy lifting or sense of FOMO. They're as delighted by unbranded street tacos as they are by thoughtfully curated spaces layered with color, texture, and story. Finding the best local strawberry or Medjool date feels just as meaningful as stepping into a designer space—both are markers of discovery.

For the Terra Luz traveler, novelty makes even the simplest moments feel worth gold, so a curated gallery wall that spans decades carries a texture to life they want to take home with them. It's nostalgia that younger generations have latched onto and older generations can see themselves in.

They come to feel something, not just see something. They're just hoping to return home recalibrated, quietly inspired, and carrying a new glow—a deeper, warmer shade of who they already were.

ABOUT YOUR HOST

Eann's journey into hospitality began at a crossroads: invest in a Tesla—or invest in something that lit her up. She chose hospitality, channeling her energy into her first property, The Cozy Cactus in Indio, and hasn't looked back since. A surfer from Culver City with a bright, bubbly spirit and an instinct for care, Eann brings both ease and intention into every home she creates. Her spaces reflect her personality: relaxed but dialed in, playful yet thoughtfully considered.

What truly excites Eann about hosting is the moment guests realize everything's already been thought of. From sharp knives and ZipLoc bag organizers to great coffee, blackout curtains, and even the occasional unexpected delight (like the straw visors), she designs with empathy—anticipating needs before guests ever have to ask.

She understands travel from the inside out: the desire to arrive, exhale, and feel instantly at home without unpacking your whole life. For Eann, hosting isn't about perfection, it's about presence. Making guests feel seen, cared for, and genuinely comfortable is the through-line in every stay she offers.

VISUAL IDENTITY

Terra Luz feels like a warm, sun-washed escape: colorful, relaxed, and full of character.

The design pulls from the textures and colors of Old Havana and Mexico City, layering foundational desert terrain neutrals with bold moments of cobalt Kahlo Blue and Desert Marigold, a golden yellow, in a way that feels collected and lived-in, not overly styled.

While the Coachella Valley's brighter buzz of Palm Springs and luxury resorts of La Quinta are within reach, guests here trade spectacle for private residential comfort, shaded retreats, and spacious getaways to settle in.

AESTHETIC

A sun-washed desert escape layered with color, texture, and soul.

Terra Luz feels like a warm, sun-washed escape: colorful, relaxed, and full of character. The design pulls from the textures and colors of Old Havana and Mexico City, layering foundational desert terrain neutrals of Sunbaked Terracotta, Sage Cactus and warm whites (like Warm Sand) with bold moments of cobalt Kahlo Blue and Desert Marigold, a golden yellow, in a way that feels collected and lived-in, not overly styled.

The outdoor space really sets the tone. Everything is color-drenched in that terracotta, from the walls to the floors, and even the pergola above creating an enveloping, grounded feel throughout the courtyard. A deep “Frida Kahlo” blue statement pool anchors the space, while pops of the golden yellow show up in the lounge furniture, umbrellas, and pool accessories to add energy and a sense of play.

Inside, the home feels intentionally connected to the outdoors. A pass-through kitchen window opens directly to the patio, making it easy to move between spaces and turning the breakfast nook into a natural gathering spot. Expanding the same terracotta tone across the kitchen wall and dining area/ sliding door wall helps blur the line between inside and out, so everything flows together seamlessly.

In the bedrooms, patterned terracotta tile floors replace carpet, instantly adding texture and personality. The primary bedroom feels balanced and calm, like its own private spa retreat. Fully painted sage green walls, plush cream bedding, and warm finishes create a sense of serenity and ease. The space is elevated with luxury amenities, including a kitchenette and private fireplace, a queen sleeper sofa, and a spa-like bathroom with a soaking tub, double vanity, and walk-in closet.

The second bedroom embraces a more playful spirit, with thoughtful print mixing that brings in a lush Cuban vibe. Retro tropical wallpaper paired with striped curtains adds boutique hotel personality—think The Pink Cabana at The Sands Hotel & Spa, but more grounded and simplified. A built-in sitting nook amplifies the charming intimacy of this room, creating a delightful personal cove, a colorful cocoon that both soothes and rejuvenates.

The third bedroom balances fun and function, featuring patterned terracotta tile floors accented with pops of cobalt blue in the throws and pillows. A printed alcove with a built-in desk and mounted TV creates a playful design moment while remaining practical for guests.

The color story of Terra Luz maximizes natural desert light with low profile furnishings and natural textures for airy, spacious roaming while designated deeper toned walls and saturated pops of color throughout can make a statement.

Select stone-textured walls and surfaces layer in more natural elements that continue to bring the outdoors in—think turning the TV unit into an earthy alcove with a darker toned stone-washed look. All this paired with more modern pops of flair, like a two toned turquoise checker board and vintage Cuban art gallery wall.

Other natural components are implemented through woven rattan—not entirely boho, like Antigua wicker rocking chairs on the back patio, the existing woven leaf ceiling fans and rattan bar stools or dining chairs. Airy, relaxed, sun-washed...island resort vibes. Built to last in the desert sun.

From one space to another, Terra Luz feels vibrant but easy, bold without being loud. It's an indoor outdoor getaway designed to slow time, rejuvenate and nurture togetherness thru natural, sensory rich aesthetics.

the Guest Touch Points of Terra Luz

GUEST TOUCH POINTS

GUEST TOUCH POINTS

Guests arrive to a refreshing quiet, a pause from city streets and desert highway alike. This home is a slow desert sanctuary, designed for deep exhale and easy mornings, tucked in the up-and-coming Indio. While the Coachella Valley’s brighter buzz of Palm Springs and luxury resorts of La Quinta are within reach, guests here trade spectacle for private residential comfort, shaded retreats, and spacious getaways to settle in. It’s a place where movement and stillness coexist.

Stepping inside, the living room glows at check-in, warm light spilling across terracotta floors and rich textures, inviting guests to immediately settle in. As guests wake the next day, that same glow illuminates the kitchen and its breakfast nook making it the heart of the home: sunlight streams across the bar top, inviting guests to pull up a bar stool for their first cup of coffee paired with local date cake and always “in-season” local strawberries snagged from the L&G Desert Store.

The kitchen pass-through window is a small but mighty moment—like a full service juice bar “off shoot” of a restaurant dining room space—creating a true indoor-outdoor exchange where conversation, cocktails, and sunlight flow both ways. With a countertop on each side of the window, it becomes a shared perch for morning coffee inside and poolside mimosas outside (fruit stand treats and Papa Headz burgers later in the day) making the patio feel like a natural extension of the kitchen. Anchoring the nook, a long credenza styled with a coffee and cocktail setup, guest pantry basket storage below, and floating shelves dotted with art, cookbooks, and collected objects turns this everyday feature into a social heart of the home.

Such an artful experience is made social in more ways than one here. One of Terra Luz's feature guest amenities invites them to lounge in style with patterned robes that follow suit with the Latin art throughout the home. Drink coasters come in the form of recycled Mexican tiles. Subtle yet intentional hospitality details like these immerse guests in the cultural experience of this property, even through the Cuban roasted coffee beans provided.

Where the kitchen is the social heart of Terra Luz, the pool and patio will remain the eye candy of this home through its aesthetics; but, the simple pleasures of water submerged loungers under the brella, meditative pebble garden and terracotta stone fire pit feel amplified here, perfect for quiet indulgence or social media-worthy moments.

Evenings flow effortlessly: guests gather around the firepit-turned-coffee-table for casual meals, grilled dinners, or order-in from local favorites like Desert Beer pizza. Movie nights take on a new magic with the inflatable screen and a curated watchlist with nods to world travel like Casablanca or Buena Vista Social Club; rom coms like Palm Springs with Andy Samberg; family flicks like Moana, Coco and Encanto.

And when it's time to tuck inside, even the more ordinary spaces feel intentionally outfitted for comfort and play: such as, the cozy soft sectional, with floor cushions and Mexican dominos ready for extended nights together; the primary king bed canopy top and wet bar making a private couples retreat in itself; the second bedroom a cultural art piece all its own; and the third bedroom the best of both worlds offering more airy space with artistic flare—a stylized desk nook & TV tucked into a patterned nook (parents will enjoy sending the kids off for their own private viewing party).

The rhythm of Terra Luz prompts guests to pause, exhale, and savor.

THE LOCAL EXPERIENCE

The personality of Terra Luz is wrapped up and reflected in local gems from neighboring cities like the Pink Cabana Restaurant at the Sands Hotel & Spa in Indian Wells, La Quinta Cliffhouse or Lola's at the Cove tapas restaurant in Old Town La Quinta, and the lively history of Palm Springs still framed in the lobbies of its every other boutique hotel and restaurant. The La Quinta and Indian Wells farmers markets are local favorites too. So when the host points her guests to these spots, they get a cultured experience aligned with the Terra Luz brand and that same soulful feeling of being transported all over again.

And within the city of Indio itself, the downtown district is growing into a revitalized corner of the desert worth the visit. Art installations, live music venues, boutiques, fast casual eateries & bars brought by owners expanding from Palm Springs and Palm Desert are growing in number. Travelers can grab savory crepes from Gambino's, smash burgers & loaded fries from Papa Headz window (enjoyed at the picnic tables or Terra Luz poolside), and matcha lattes from Everbloom's second, more spacious location. On the same block, there's an open air concert stage with lawn space that holds free community events like bi-weekly yoga.

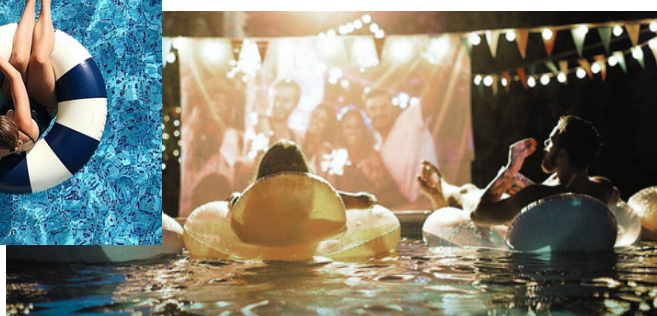

Medjool dates (famously native to this desert), the sweetest local produce and homemade tamales from L&G Market are conveniently located literally around the corner from Terra Luz for daily drop ins to see what's new that day. A taco truck shows up there too when it feels like it. Similarly, an open air swap meet market of eclectic goods. If guests are craving a more elevated shopping experience, there's always OldPg. 14

Town La Quinta and The Gardens on El Paseo in Palm Desert.

Note: plans to expand upon select annual events

POOL & PATIO

Below is a punch list of ways travelers feel drawn to Terra Luz pool and patio both on the Insta grid and onsite. Select snap shots are about traveler-first framing: evidence of guests (whether by subject or travel prop) experiencing Terra Luz “in the moment”; other snap shots showcase the pure art of the Terra Luz aesthetic and amenities.

- Terracotta-on-terracotta landscape with a saturated Frida-blue pool that visually snaps against the warm backdrop
- Permanent in-pool loungers under an umbrella, shot with toe-painted feet, book + spritz in hand
- Featuring the “viral” concrete Neighbor fire pit coffee table at dusk, with a low drink, soft flame, and pool reflections catching in the background...especially marketable for Indio’s cold month shoulder season
- Opposite facing the fire pit lounge, Antigua wicker rocking chairs at the pool’s edge, styled with patterned pillows and accent table against wood panel wall
- Light weight, patterned robes worn poolside—movement shots, fabric catching the breeze, coffee or cocktail in hand
- Pass-through kitchen window moment: Palomas, fruit bowls, or burgers mid-handoff—hands meeting from inside to out
- Fresh local produce popping in color (ruby red strawberries, sliced mango, citrus) styled on neutral platters against terracotta surfaces
- Gourmet grill glow-ups: open flame, styled grill tools, patterned mitts, and a cookbook casually flipped open nearby
- Backyard movie night (add-on service): inflatable Funboy screen lit up after dark, pool glowing with decorations, fire pit on
- Shaded pea-gravel side yard, captured in dappled light—kids hopping pavers or adults barefoot, mid-wander; Zen garden rake nearby
- In motion: golden hour + blue hour transitions: shadows stretching across the patio, then pool lights coming on as the sky deepens
- In motion: profile angle of pool side while bottom half of yellow-robed figure passes through frame
